

The grief felt by the loss of an Airman ripples throughout the Air Force. As painful as a loss is to our community, it pales by comparison to the grief surviving loved ones experience. The information presented in this pamphlet provides an overview of entitlements for surviving family members of fallen active duty (and their dependents), retiree, and veterans of the Armed Forces. Specifics regarding Mortuary Affairs program eligibility and entitlements are detailed in Air Force Instruction 34-242.

The Installation Mortuary Affairs Officer is the only person authorized to provide the entitlements briefing to surviving next of kin. However, it is necessary for all to have an understanding of Mortuary and Honor Guard entitlements. Thus, the installation commander appoints a military volunteer, the Family Liaison Officer (FLO), as the official link between the family and the Air Force.

Personal care of and attention to the surviving family is a proud military tradition taken seriously by those in command. Thus, the FLO interfaces with the family until an accident investigation board is complete or the family no longer wants unsolicited contact. The FLO provides any and all assistance required by the surviving family members, including working with support agencies that administer benefits following the death of a DoD member.
